A History of Ss Peter & Paul's Church

In SS Peter and Paul's Place, just off Saint Patrick's Street, is the church of Saints Peter and Paul. This is the parish church of the parish of Saints Peter and Paul. Architecturally, it is one of the finest churches in the city. The foundation stone of the church was laid on 15 August 1859 and the church was dedicated for worship on 29 June 1866. It replaced an older church, built in 1786, which was entered from Carey's Lane and known as Carey's Lane Chapel.

The church is built of red sandstone with dressings of limestone. The ridge of the roof was originally decorated by ornamental ironwork, partly gilded, terminating at the western gable by an ornamental cross with foliated arms.

The prime mover in the building of SS Peter and Paul's was Archdeacon John Murphy. He was a member of the wealthy family of brewers and had a most unusual early career for a future priest as he had worked for a time as a fur trader with the Hudson Bay Company in Canada. E. W. Pugin, a noted architect of the time, designed the church. Pugin's father, Augustus Pugin, was largely responsible for the revival of the Gothic style in architecture. The high altar was designed by C. C. Ashlin and executed by Samuel Daly. It was consecrated in August 1874. In 1875 a new pulpit, again designed by Ashlin, and sanctuary stalls were added.

The western doorway is recessed, as in an alcove, and is flanked with ornamental jambs. A triangular heading surmounts the arch over the doorway and the doors are hung with ornamental iron hinges. An arcade of small blank arches flank the principle doorway. Over the doorway is the great western window of the church. Through the small porch or narthex the nave is seen to terminate in the chancel.

Beyond the narthex is the body of the church consisting of nave and side aisles. Both aisles are divided from the nave by an arcade of arches. The arches rest on columns of polished red marble. The clerestory, resting on carved capitals, houses large windows; twelve decorative marble plinths support statues of the twelve apostles. The roof is of open timber work, the principle beams resting on corbels, carved in representation of the choirs of angles.
